HANDSOME LOTS OFFERED ON EASY TERMS!

The Superiority of BUILDING LOTS On this New Street is universally admitted.

Yea, it is a Christian duty,
To secure a pleasant home,
When the days so dark and rainy,
Of a stormy life shall come.
Yea, to feel one's self protected
From the Ulaste that winter sends,
Is a step of first importance
To all parents and their friends.

VOL. XXXVIII.

MIDDLEBURY, VT., FEBRUARY 17, 1874.

ONLY A BEGGAR.

BY ELEANOR.

Only a beggar! the silken robes Only a begger; the site of roots
Are drawn aside in cold contempt.
A sad, sad face, with pleading eyes,
A tattered dress, and bair unkempt
only a begger, with shockes feet,
Traveling about in the gas-lit street.

The burning tears fall thick and fact, Adown the child's wan face,
Lost, in the cruel, pitiless street,
Without a resting place;
Lost and in our wretched home,
Mother is starving, dying alone.

Alone in a hovel, dark and cold,

Dying for want of bread,
While the rich man lounges, a few blocks off,
On the choicest viands fed.
That lowly thing, a drunkard's wife,
Only an outcast, but a human life. Forsaken of man, forgiven of God,

One woman less to weep,
No tears will start, for the tired child
Lost in the stormy street.
A miserable drunkard's, motherless child,
Lost in the night storm, fierce and wild. On the marble steps of a mansion grand,

In the marine clear and cold,
In the morning clear and cold,
They found a little, freten form,
In garments ragged and oll;
Only a little, tateed form,
Frozen to death in the pitiless storm Happy mothers, with children dear, Clu-tered ab at your knee,
"Inasmuch as ye did it not to these.
Yo did it not to me."
Ouly a beggar! O turn not away,
You'll meet again at the judgment day.

The Other Side.

A little matron sat by the fire. on a ery for the baby in the cradie, and a lan cy box, evidently new, containing choice confectionery. Although the room, mother and child formed a picture of comfort, yet Bella Osmond was crying. While the tear drops fell upon her lit-

So much has been said about the vite streets of Columbus, and without effect, that it seems like a waste of breath to add anything more on the subject. But I must for my own relief be permitted to give a last houest, heartfelt growl about these same thoroughfares, where in win-ter there is " no thoroughfare." In summer these treets are beds of dust; in winter they are fathomless seas of mud. The condition of these streets is a shame and disgrace, not alone to Columbus, but to the great State of which it is the Capibeautify Columbus has been done by the It has honored her with the guardianship of all its treasures; it has placed within her limits its magn ficent public buildings, made her the representative city of the third great State of the Union, and she shows her appreciation of the honor and pride in the dignity conferred upon her by sitting down to her dirt year after year,ragged, unkempt and F.
